

Choosing A Rehabilitation Program

A list of questions to consider as you and your loved one prepare to choose a rehabilitation program.

YES NO

- Does the program provide the services your loved one needs?
- Does it match your loved one's abilities?
- Is it too demanding or not demanding enough?
- Is it certified?
- Does its staff have good credentials?
- Is it located where you and family members can easily visit?
- Does it actively involve you and other family members in rehabilitation decisions?
- Does it encourage caregivers to participate in some rehabilitation sessions and practice with their loved ones?
- If it is an outpatient or home program, will you or someone else be available to provide in-home care?
- If it is an outpatient program, is transportation available?

What do others in the community think of the quality of the program?

How well are its costs covered by insurance or Medicare?

NOTES:

© Copyright FamilyCare America, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Adapted from Recovering After a Stroke, AHCPH Publication No. 95-0664, prepared by the Agency for Healthcare Policy and Research.

For additional tools for caregiving or aging, visit www.CaregiversLibrary.org